

TROOPER, PA - Advanced Driver Training Services announces that Brian Hollo has been promoted to Instructor Development Coordinator for Advanced Driver Training (ADTS). The promotion is effective August 1, 2013.

Tom DiRocco, President of ADTS said, "In this capacity, Brian will travel nationwide to coordinate and conduct In-Service Training for new and prospective Instructors, Lead Instructor Training and also ensure quality controls at our training programs. Brian brings a wealth of driver training knowledge and experience and has been with ADTS since 2000."

Brian served with the Illinois State Police (ISP) for over 27 years before retiring December 31, 2010. While at the ISP Brian was certified in, then instructed EVOC training from 1987. He received Council on Law Enforcement Education and Training (C.L.E.E.T.) Certification in Oklahoma in 1995 to instruct in the southwest portion of the Country. Brian coordinated and taught ISP Cadets, ISP In-service and new instructor courses. He also conducted In-service and Instructor training for other local and out of state police officers.

"We know Brian will be very successful in his new assignment in maintaining and, improving where possible, the overall quality of our driver training programs", DiRocco said.

Hollo will also continue to act as a Lead Instructor for ADTS training programs conducted throughout the world.

ADTS is a leading provider of driver safety training services and products that include a full-day Driver Skill Enhancement program (combining classroom and behind-the-wheel instruction), one-to-one training for high-risk drivers, seminars, post-incident coaching and other consulting services, online training, and the OnRoads bimonthly driver safety magazine. For more details, visit www.adtsweb.com or contact the company at 1-800-486-ADTS or info@adtsweb.com.

###